This owens, a process server in the office of District-Attorney Whitmen, who has a wife and two small children at No. 342 St. Nicholas avenue, was held by Magistrate Levy in the West Side Police Court to-day in 11.600 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury on a serious charge brought by aixteen-year-old Elsie Wursien. At the same time William Ross of No. 211 Hinsdale street, Brooklyn, who, the police say, has a record as a general thief, was held in $2,500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury on the charge that he abducted fifteen-year-old May Sanford corroborated Bisle's story and told of a conversation she had had with her after her visit on Raturday. Then Mr. Lockhart rested the case.

Schalow demanded that he be heard. He told how Elsie had accused Owens to him and how May Sanford corroborated ber story. He asked to be allowed to summon Dr. Elizabeth Comstock, who examined the Wursien girl in the Florence of the apartment house, but Magistrate Levy exclaimed:

"I'll hold this defendant in $1,000 bail," so it will not be necessary to call your witnesses. They will be heard before the Grand Jury."

Ross amitted the house again, remaining for more than an hour in the company of Owens.

plaint by letter had informed Dwyer that an apartment in the house was of a disorderly character and Schalow found the Sanford girl alone there. Very much frightened, she admitted that Rose and Owens maintained the flat, and when the Wursten girl and later Rose entered Schalow arrested them. Owens was arrested Theader in the District-Attorney's office.

Assistant District-Attorney Lockhart contented himself with calling Elsie Wursien and May Sanford to testify against Owens. The former is pretty, with blonds hair, and she lived with her parents at No. 416 West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street. She said she knew May Sanford, and on Thursday of last week accepted a telephone invitation to go with her to the Harlem Opera House. There they met Owens and Ross, and the four went to the One Hundredth street flat. Owens's advances fright-

NEW YORK COTTON MARKET.

Wheat was quiet and steady, with light offerings. Favorable crop reports did not produce much liquidation. Prices advanced in early afternoon, with May wheat selling at $1 on further covering of shorts on reports of black rust in Ohio. Closing 1-4 to 5-5 advance.

Corn was easier on cables and prospects of rain. The market held steady, with some buying on reports that corn was backward east of the Mississippi. Closing 1-8 to 1-4 higher than yesterday.

"Between the providence of God and the wiles of Mr. Robbins, or vice versa, can you tell hoy the Maine Steamship Company got the wharves of the Metropolitan Bteamship Company in Boston?" To cannot," said Mr. Mellen. He added that the records ought to tell the facts. He also remarked to Mr. Littleton that he had heard so much about the Metropolitan's affairs since this case was begun that he was trying to find out something about them himself. Mr. Littleton suggested that they pool their information. MELLEN ON STAND former general counsel; Augustus May, treasurer; A. E. Clark, secretary, and J. M. Tomlinson, general auditor of the company.

The hearing was before Jesse R. Salmon, commissioner and master in chancery of New Jersey. There were present as counsel, for Mr. Mellen, J. W. H. Crim, and for the plaintiffs, Martin W. Lattleton, chief counsel, and Owen T. Brown, E. Gill Wyle and Conover English.

Mr. Mellen was the first witness.

Questions by Mr. Faulkes brought from Mr. Mellen answers to the effect that directly or indirectly he had no knowledge that the New Haven road had ownership in the stock of the Metropolitan Steamship Company, nor did any subsidiary of the New Haven Company. Mr. Mellen added that to the best of his knowledge the New Haven road never had anything to do Haven road never had anything to do with the affairs of the steamship company.

Mr. Faulkes asked Mr. Mellen what

"None that I can recall," said Mr. Mellen.

Mr. Faulkes: "Now, Mr. Mellen, did any of the funds of the New Haven read or any of its subsidiaries go into the securities of the two Metropolitan Steamship companies, the New England Securities Company, the Chilmark Company or the Eastern Security Company of Maine?"

Mr. Mellen: "No. str. I do not see how it would be possible for any investment to have been made in the securities of those companies. Furthermore, I have no knowledge of any of those securities mentioned."

The most interesting part of Mr. Mellen's testimony came when he was cross-examined by Martin W. Littleton for Miss Morse. He was called upon to describe as closely as recollection served him the details of discussions he had with Thomas Mc-Govern, who had attempted to dispose of the assets of the Metropolitan Company and later with a Capt. Goodall, who wanted to take the two passenger steamers to the Pacific coast and who wanted Mr. Mellen to
